Thanksgiving Turkey Do's and Don'ts

Can you believe it's almost Thanksgiving? If you're like most of us, you're starting to think about family get-togethers and menu items for the Thanksgiving meal. You might also be thinking of different ways to make your turkey.

It's easy to find new or alternative ways to cook turkey other than the traditional baked variety, but it's important to know which methods are safe and which are not.

Let's look at a few safe and unsafe methods.

Safe, alternative methods include:

- The Oven cooking bag method involves preheating your oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit and should produce a moist-heat cooking environment for the turkey (use fresh or thawed turkey for this method).
- The Fried method is usually done with smaller turkeys (8-10 pounds) and peanut oil.
- The Grilled method is also used with smaller, unstuffed turkeys, weighing 8 to 14 pounds. The oven should be set between 325 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit to grill a turkey.

Whichever method used, remember that the minimum internal temperature for a whole, cooked turkey is 165 degrees Fahrenheit. It is also important that you carefully read the instructions for the cooking method and that you wash your hands, utensils, and counters that may have been contacted by raw turkey. You do not need to wash the turkey.

Unsafe, alternative methods include:

- The Brown Paper Bag Method involves placing the turkey in a large brown paper bag and cooking. Chemicals in the bag may seep into the food, making it unsafe.
- The Slow-cooking overnight method puts you and your dinner guests at risk of food poisoning due to the low cooking temperature used.
- The Trash Bag method involves placing the turkey in a trash bag and marinating it for several hours at room temperature, which could result in bacteria buildup.
